

Dunigan brings new vision to run for mayor

Karen Dunigan has long been an avid supporter of the Jackson community. From co-chairing capital campaigns for Ella Sharp Museum and Cascades “Revive the Pride” to chairing the city’s Zoning Board of Appeals and Tax Review Board, Dunigan puts her beliefs into action. Now she has raised her community involvement to another level by running for mayor of Jackson.

“I believe that I can make a difference,” said Dunigan, regional vice president of Edward Surovell Realtors. “I look for solutions and I see every problem as an opportunity to learn.”

To deal with the tough economic issues the city faces, Dunigan has developed an ACE plan: Accountability, Challenge and Excellence. To be accountable to the citizens, she wants to develop a strategic plan that will make the best use of the city’s shrinking revenue. She also wants to improve communication so that citizens are aware of important city matters and can make their voices heard.

“I want to become a city that answers every inquiry with a can-do attitude,” said Dunigan, a Jackson-area Realtor® for over 30 years.

To accomplish her goals with an eye toward excellence, Dunigan would draw on her business experience, active community involvement and lifelong love of Jackson and its people. She would employ the same energy and creative problem-solving needed by the City Council and the new City Manager.

“It is vitally important to take an active role in the city’s future if I want to see the city succeed for my nieces and nephews and everyone’s children and grandchildren,” said Dunigan.
